You forgot to take that pencil drawing down did you not. Never mind there is no hurry about it.

I am getting through the week and counting the days till you come back. I hope it will be pleasant next week so that you and Rhoda can ride a good deal. I do not find any advertisement of the narrow gauge road in the papers. If I do in time I will send it to you.

Thursday morn

Dear Billie

Your postal rec.

I am sure I trust the change in Library matters will not be made, but don't be troubled about it. If that resource fails, I doubt not some other way will open, and at any rate we won't borrow trouble about it.

I suppose you had rain last night as we did. Charlie is in very much the same distracted condition that he was. Mr. Deroy wrote him that he must go up today to see about ^{renting} some mining lands, and C. could not get all his company off, but but I have two more patients on hand. The day you went away Mrs. Keeler asked me if I would not go down and see his wife. I found her a little Spring feverish, and prescribed, and sent her some medicine. He reports her doing well. Then I found Ah Ty was having a very bad cough and prescribed for him giving him some medicine. Next day I asked him if he took it. Oh yes I eat him medicine he said.

To day I asked him how he felt, he said Oh bully, so I don't see but my patients are likely to do me credit.

Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Blythe were both in yesterday.
Mrs. Allen had a very bad cold coming on.

The Atlantic Monthly
came yesterday and has in it rather a sharp review of Avis, written I should ^{say} ~~say~~ a masculine hand and from a masculine standpoint
but saying at the same time some true things,
stirring my indignation however by the light way in which he speaks of the flirtation of which Avis' Husband was guilty as if it was a very natural and to be expected thing. There is an awful short-story which ~~so~~ far as I can see can plead neither beauty
